Mayor Jacobs Talks About National Injury Prevention Day, the Criminal Court Clerk's Office, and More

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.— During his Weekly Update, which will be posted around 3 p.m. today, Knox County Mayor Glenn Jacobs talks about National Injury Prevention Day and a number of events he attended.

In addition, Mayor Jacobs discusses a program that Knox County Criminal Clerk's Office relaunched that offers community service to some indigent defendants who cannot afford to pay their court costs.

The Mayor also notes: "It's a huge game tomorrow at Neyland Stadium as the University of Tennessee football team takes on No. 1 Georgia. Who knows, you might even run into Dolly Parton as she cheers on the Vols."
